Published by the National Garden Clubs, Inc., the colorfully illustrated environmental tale is written from a frog's point of view and encourages young readers to take good care of the environment. The book includes introductory pages for parents and educators, a glossary of terms, fun frog facts, and a list of how frog sounds are spoken in languages around the world.

Conservation and education are two significant segments of the work done by The Framingham Garden Club, Inc., which will be partnering with the Framingham Public Library next fall for a juried National Flower Show to be held at the Library.
